

New centre gives teenagers a chance to shine

YOUNGSTERS in Edmonton are being offered a free service to boost their education and get a foot on the job ladder.

The new drop-in centre is at 58 Market Square, inside Edmonton Green Shopping Centre, and is open every Saturday.

Students can get help and advice on homework, learn how to polish up their CV, and find out how to make a good impression in an interview.

Mohammed Omer runs the service, which does not yet have a title, with the help of centre owners, St Modwens.

He said: "Young people today are under a great deal of pressure and often in need of a place where they can receive confidential advice and support.

"The new drop-in centre will provide this and after many months of hard work, we're delighted to see it up and running."
